Avoyelles French Family Name Origins

Avoyelleans: French Creoles

THE FIRST COLONISTS OF AVOYELLES

Avoyelleans: Before the Cajuns...there were the Creoles

A Brief Genealogy of the first families of a given name in Avoyelles, Louisiana

Avoyelles Parish was settled by predominantly direct French Immigrants and their descendants.....long before the Acadians came to Louisiana, the ancestors of Avoyelles were settled here. The Avoyelles french settled first in Pt. Coupee and New Orleans, then made their way to Avoyelles by 1781...hence the address of this web page. Names such as Bordelon, DeCuir, Laborde, Normand are unique to the Greater Avoyelles area... All of the first families were from France, either directly or by way of Quebec, except the DeCuir family which came from Macon, Hainaut, Belgium and the Scallan family who came from Ireland. Only two of the early families which came to Avoyelles, Jeansonne and Moulard, have ties to Acadia, with Jeansonne actually being an Acadian version of Johnson, a Scottish name. Both of these migrants took Acadian brides. A few French Creole families, including DuPlessy and Michot made their way to Avoyelles from Haiti after the slave rebellion. f if you wish to share genealogical information let us list your -email number with a particular....you must be willing to respond, as a person knowledgeable with others about these families:

ORIGINS OF SOME EARLY AVOYELLES NAMES IN EUROPE:

Most of the original caucasian settlers of Avoyelles have French origins. The original 50 or so families who settled in Avoyelles in the late 1700s mostly came from Pointe Coupee, and for the most part were the children or grandchildren of direct-French immigrants, known locally as French Creoles, not to be confused with the Creole families of New Orleans. A few of these early Avoyelles families came through Canada - but none were part of the famous Acadian expulsion. Therefore, the French in Avoyelles are not bloodlined with the Acadian families of south Louisiana who have a completely different set of surnames within the United States. When you hear one of these names when you are in New York or California, you can be almost positive the person with one of the names on this webpage has ancestors in Avoyelles. This first wave of French settlers to Avoyelles came after the flood of 1780 which covered much of Pt. Coupee. The flood safe prairie of Avoyelles is high above the Mississippi Flood Plane. Avoyelles Parish is still home to the descendants of the first families of Louisiana. The surnames of Avoyelles today greatly represent the first census of New Orleans and Pointe Coupee in the early 1700s. The first families of Louisiana are alive and well, and living in Avoyelles. Just check the phonebook today to see the names.

Since Avoyelles was settled by 1781, we choose 1781 as the original web address for this web page at geocities.

After Geocities closed, we moved the page to this domain of avoyelles.com.

The second wave of French migration into Avoyelles came in the mid 1800s, as several direct French immigrants came to the Mansura-Marksville area. Some of these later french families were: Brou, EscudÈ, Durand, Casteran, Caubarreaux, and Maillet.

The following list of names has been compiled over a period of time, and documented from various sources. The compiler, Randy DeCuir, has recently visited France twice where he has studied some of the areas. Mr. Laurent Bourgouis of Thuin, Belgium, has identified the modern day locations of most of these ancestral native towns.

Michot - One branch of the Michot family of Avoyelles stems from Eugene Michot who came to Barbin's Landing after the Civil War. His ancestor was from LaCharitÈ sur Loire, in central France. Eugene HonorÈ Michot, his father has a proven royal line through the Daspit-St. Amant family of New Orleans. See: http://www.geocities.com/BourbonStreet/Delta/1725/cdf_1.htm for a history of the St. Amant-Daspit family.
